Officer of British Royal Flying Corps Here to Find Recruits

OTHER CITY NEWS BRIEFS

Sailor Held in Bail on Charge of Robbing Man Who Befriended Him

The city will pay $1,036,000 for a portion of the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital, which will be torn down on the line of the Parkway. This amount was decided upon under a compromise agreement this afternoon between representatives of the Board of Viewers and the Medico-Chirurgical and University of Pennsylvania Hospitals.

Britain Seeks Airmen Here Captain Allan Miller Thomas, of the Royal Flying Corps Great Britain, has spent two days in Philadelphia to seek British subjects as recruits for the corps. He said the applicants must be well educated and between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five. Every man completing the required course is made a second lieutenant, he explained.

Accused Sailor Held Accused of robbing his benefactor, Paul Krusky, twenty-one years old, a sailor, was arrested and held in $600 bail by Magistrate Baker. Some months ago, the police say, Krusky was befriended by William McVeigh, of 1515 South Humberger street, but returned the kindness by stealing a ring.

Columbia Photographic Prize The winner of the cup given annually by the Columbia Photographic Society for the best piece of photographic work done by a member during the year will be announced tonight at the regular meeting of the society at 2526 North Broad street. Several other prizes for minor contest work will also be awarded.

War Risk Bureau to Open in City The United States Treasury Department will have a Bureau of War Risk Insurance opened in the Custom House tomorrow morning for insuring seamen, masters and officers of all kinds of American vessels. New rates will be effective after tomorrow and these are subject to change without notice. Vessel owners may insure with the bureau or with the regular insurance companies. It is provided that benefits will be paid in case of capture or detention.

Home Rule Mass-Meeting Planned A mass-meeting of Irishmen in Philadelphia in interest of home rule is being planned. A preliminary meeting was held last night in Grand Fraternity Auditorium, 124 Arch street. Michael Donohoe called the meeting and presided. Michael Deegan and Dr. Hugh O'Donnell urged the committee to work for the meeting. Mrs. Margaret Kelly, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, A. O. M., and Miss Mary Gallagher, president of the State Federation, pledged the support of their organization. At the end of the meeting $500 was subscribed to pay expenses of the meeting.

ARMORY STORMED BY B ENGINEERS TO ROUSE MOSE, SLEEPY JANITOR

Guardsmen, Ordered to Mobilize, Have to Hammer at Door an Hour Before Rosy Dreams Are Dissolved

It's foolish to have a war on Monday morning. Everybody's tired from Sunday and not in condition to fight. That's what Mose thought about it. Mose is janitor-in-chief of Company B, Engineers Armory, Thirty-second street and Lancaster avenue. In addition to being a faithful worker he's also a faithful sleeper. When he does a thing he believes in doing it well. He was in the midst of a perfect sleep this morning, dreaming of the days when watermelon and chicken could be had by any one with ambition and a long arm when all of a sudden "Rat-a-tat-a-tat-tat-tat-tat" on the door. "Bang, bang, biff" and finally—"Shebang!" Mose opened both eyes at once and gazed at the roof. He wanted to move, but he couldn't. Every moment he expected to see a bomb come through the roof and find himself all in little pieces. "It's ole Zepp Linn, dat's who it am," said Mose. "During a lull he slid out of bed cautiously and groped his way to the window.

WEIR MITCHELL SPRINGS SURPRISE IN MARRIAGE

Grandson of Neurologist and Author and Son of Dramatist Weds Miss Margaret Travis

Weir Mitchell, grandson of the late Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, is in Atlantic City today on a brief honeymoon with his bride, two days, who was Miss Margaret Helen Travis, of Troy, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell were married on Saturday afternoon at St. James's Catholic Church, Thirty-eighth and Chestnut streets, but their friends did not learn of the wedding until today. Young Mr. Mitchell, who is twenty-five years old, enlisted in the United States marine corps two weeks ago and is stationed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. A grandson of the famous author and neurologist, he is a son of Langdon Mitchell, well known as a playwright. The family home at 3230 De Lancy place is closed for the summer and Langdon Mitchell is in New York. Prior to his enlistment on the first day of Marine Corps Recruiting Week, Weir Mitchell was engaged in the banking and brokerage business in this city.

Milk Up in Price at Elmer, N. J.

ELMER, N. J., June 25.—Milk will go up to ten cents a quart today at Elmer, where consumers have heretofore paid lower rates than those prevailing in the large cities because of their nearness to Salem County's big dairying district.
